the contact details of the registrant or domain name holder, together with a request that the domain name should remain locked.

On December 30, 2019, the Registrar transmitted by email to the Center its verification response confirming that Respondent as listed above as the Respondent in this proceeding is the registrant of the disputed domain name and providing the contact details of the registrant, including the email address being lichangliangtttt@163.com. The Centre on the same day advised the parties of that appointment.

3. Factual background

Complainant

The following facts have been taken from the Complaint.

The Complainant, Educational Testing Service, was founded in 1947 and is one of the world’s largest private nonprofit educational testing and assessment organizations which is based in the United States. The Complainant develops various standardized tests primarily in the United States for K-12 and higher education, and it also administers international tests including the TOEFL, TOEIC, GRE Tests, and the Praxis test Series in more than 180 countries, and at over 10,000 locations worldwide. In total, the Complainant annually administers 50 million international tests annually including the TOEFL, TOEIC, GRE Tests in more than 180 countries, and at over 10,000 locations worldwide.
The Complainant is the owner of over 100 TOEFL-inclusive trademarks around the world, i.e. trademarks including the Complainant’s principal trademark, TOEFL. The Complainant tenders as evidence a printout of the search results from the WIPO Global Brand online database, using Educational Testing Service and TOEFL as the keywords for the owner name and the mark respectively. Amongst which the mark TOEFL has been registered in the United States for “educational testing services-namely, administering tests dealing with languages” in Class 41 since 1978 (registration no. 73155230). Further evidence tendered by the Complainant is a printout of the USPTO online register of the mark no. 73155230 registered in the United States.

The Complainant has also registered many trademarks containing TOEFL in China details of which are also tendered as evidence. The Complainant submits that it can be seen from that evidence that the TOEFL-inclusive marks are registered in classes 9, 16 and 41 in China. The Complainant also tenders as evidence a printout of the records retrieved from the online database of the China Trademarks Office showing that the Complainant obtained registration for its TOEFL mark in Class 41 in China as early as 1983. The Complainant than lists its TOEFL-inclusive registrations (including its Chinese equivalent “托福” owned by the Complainant in China, to which reference will be made later in this decision if necessary.

The Complainant makes the complaint that is the subject of this proceeding as, first, it claims that it owns the TOEFL and TOEFL-inclusive trademarks used in the services of administering and scoring examinations relating to English language proficiency and other education related services. Secondly, it disputes the registration by the Respondent of the domain name <toeflr.com> (“the disputed domain name”) which it maintains is identical or confusingly similar to its TOEFL trademark.

Respondent

The Panel is unable to describe the factual background from the perspective of the Respondent as it did not file a Response.

4. Parties’ Contentions

A. Complainant

The Complainant’s contentions may be summarized as follows:

i) The disputed domain name is confusingly similar to a trademark or service mark in which the Complainant has rights. The Complainant submits that the disputed domain name incorporates the TOEFL trademark in its entirety and that the mark is readily identifiable as it is placed at the front of the disputed domain name.

The Complainant has registered the trademark TOEFL in the US since 1978 and also in China since 1983. The disputed domain name, however, was only created on March 7, 2019, which is substantially later than registration date of the TOEFL trademarks.
In addition to incorporating the TOEFL trademark in the domain name, the Respondent has added the letter “r”, but this carries minimal distinctiveness. It is therefore submitted that the disputed domain name is highly similar to the Complainant’s TOEFL trademarks in which the Complainant has rights. Moreover, as will be argued, the result of this construction of the domain name is that confusion is likely to be caused to the public.

ii) The Respondent has no rights or legitimate interests in the disputed domain name.

In support of the Complainant’s submission that there is a prima facie case that the Respondent has no rights or legitimate interest in the disputed domain name, the Complainant says:

(a) The Respondent’s name, Qing Lin has no connection with the term “toefl” and/or “toeflr”, the former being the same spelling as the trademark and the latter being the same spelling as the domain name.

(b) No trademark registration in relation to “toeflr” is owned by the Respondent.

(c) The Complainant has no relationship with the Respondent. The Complainant has never authorized the Respondent to use TOEFL or to register a domain name or part of a domain name on the Complainant’s behalf.

(d) The Respondent has used the Complainant’s mark to register the disputed domain name without authorization from the Complainant.

(e) The distinctiveness of the TOEFL mark that has been included in the disputed domain name has increased through its extensive use by the Complainant worldwide, including in China and the fame that has resulted from that use. As a result, a unique connection has been established between the TOEFL mark and the Complainant which shows that the Respondent must have had knowledge of the Complainant and the mark when the domain name was registered on March 7, 2019.

(f) The Complainant submits that there can be no explanation for Respondent adopting “toefl” in its domain name, except for the purpose of passing off and creating the appearance of a connection with the Complainant.

iii) The disputed domain name has been registered and is being used in bad faith.

That is so because the facts of the matter bring it squarely within the provisions of paragraph 4(b) of the Policy.

The disputed domain name is now used by the Respondent to host a website which provides assisted services for candidates taking the TOEFL, GRE or other examinations organized by the Complainant. Evidence will be tendered to show the content that appears on the website to which the domain name resolves. It is submitted that it shows the Respondent had actual knowledge of the TOEFL trademark when the domain name was registered.

Moreover, the use of the trademark in the domain name shows an attempt to attract commercial gain by creating a likelihood of confusion with the Complainant.
The website hosted under the disputed domain name is in Chinese and it would be logical to infer that the target audience is Chinese. As mentioned above, the Complainant has acquired worldwide fame in the education industry, particularly in China. According to the pinyin name of the Respondent, he or she appears to be Chinese and the provided registered address is in China.

The Complainant submits that it has invested substantially in China and has attained a high degree of fame and reputation in respect of education services in China. The Respondent must have deliberately chosen the disputed domain name to confuse the candidates who are interested in the Complainant’s TOEFL or other examinations into associating the Respondent with the Complainant as a partner or in some way related to the Complainant.

The domain name begins with the element “toefl”. When the general public perform an internet search for key words such as “toefl” or directly key in “toefl” at the address bar, it is possible that the website hosted under the dispute domain name may pop up.

The Complainant engages in the business of education where reputation is of prime importance and the Complainant represents an international standard for English proficiency. The reputation of the Complainant will be severely damaged and the general public’s interest will be compromised if they are misled into believing that there is some sort of relationship between the Complainant and the disputed domain name or that the Respondent is an affiliate or is endorsed by the Complainant.

There is also no reason for the Respondent to adopt a domain name which is highly similar to the Complainant’s marks other than to try to have a free ride on the fame and reputation of the Complainant and to attract, for commercial gain, internet users to the Respondent’s web site. The situation stipulated in paragraph 4(b)(iv) of the Policy has thus been satisfied.

Accordingly, the Complainant submits that the disputed domain name has been registered and is being used in bad faith by the Respondent.

B. Respondent

The Respondent did not file a Response in this proceeding.

5. Findings

The ICANN Uniform Domain Name Dispute Resolution Policy provides, at Paragraph 4(a), that each of three findings must be made in order for a Complainant to prevail:

i. Respondent’s domain name is identical or confusingly similar to a trademark or service mark in which Complainant has rights; and

ii. Respondent has no rights or legitimate interests in respect of the domain name; and
iii. Respondent’s domain name has been registered and is being used in bad faith.

The Panel will now deal with each of these three elements in turn.

A) Identical / Confusingly Similar

The first question that arises is whether Complainant has rights in a trademark or service mark on which it may rely. Complainant claims to have registered trademark rights arising from a series of registrations for TOEFL internationally. The Complainant draws attention to one registered trademark in particular, registered in the United States and a group of trademarks registered in China which are significant because the Respondent is apparently domiciled in China.

The first of the trademarks is the trademark serial number 733155230 and registered number 1103427 in the United States Patent and Trademark Office ("USPTO") for TOEFL, registered in the name of the Complainant. This trademark was registered on October 3, 1978.

The group of trademarks registered in China are for TOEFL and for TOEFL-inclusive trademarks. In addition, the Complainant has a series of other TOEFL and TOEFL-inclusive trademarks.

All of the foregoing trademarks have been meticulously proven by the Complainant by evidence of registrations which the Panel accepts. Registration of a mark with the USPTO or with other internationally recognised domestic and international authorities sufficiently confers a complainant’s rights in a mark for the purposes of paragraph 4(a)(i) of the Policy See DIRECTV, LLC v. The Pearline Group, FA 1818749 (Forum Dec. 30, 2018) ("Complainant’s ownership of a USPTO registration for DIRECTV demonstrate its rights in such mark for the purposes of Policy 4(a)(i).”).

The Complainant has thus established the registered trademarks referred to ("the TOEFL mark"). Accordingly, the Panel finds that the Complainant has established rights in the TOEFL mark for the purposes of paragraph 4(a)(i) of the Policy.

It is also clear that the Complainant has established that the TOEFL mark is extensive and well-known internationally including in China.

The next question that arises is whether the disputed domain name is identical or confusingly similar to Complainant’s TOEFL mark. Complainant argues that the <toefir.com> domain name is confusingly similar to Complainant’s TOEFL mark as it contains the TOEFL mark in its entirety, merely adding the letter “r”, along with adding a gTLD. Misspelling of a complainant’s mark, either by adding or removing letters, and adding a gTLD will not negate any confusing similarity between a disputed domain name and a mark under paragraph 4(a)(i) of the Policy. See Twitch Interactive, Inc. v. zhong qin, FA 1626511 (Forum Aug. 4, 2015) ("The relevant comparison then resolves to the trademark, TWITCH, with the term, ‘titch,’ which, as can be readily seen, merely removes the letter ‘w’ from the trademark. In spite of that omission the compared integers remain visually and aurally very similar and so Panel finds them to be confusingly similar for the purposes of the Policy."); see also Trip Network Inc. v. Alviera, FA 914943 (Forum Mar. 27, 2007) (concluding that the affixation of a gTLD to a domain name is irrelevant to a paragraph 4(a)(i) Policy analysis). The same can clearly be said of the present case where the Respondent has merely added a single letter. The Complainant also makes a strong point by submitting that the letter “r” “carries minimal distinctiveness” and that, in any event, placing the TOEFL part of the domain name at the beginning emphasizes that the domain name is virtually claiming that it is a TOEFL domain name. Therefore, for all of these reasons the Panel finds that the disputed domain name is confusingly similar to Complainant’s TOEFL mark within the meaning of paragraph 4(a)(i) of the Policy.

Complainant has thus made out the first of the three elements that it must establish.

B) Rights and Legitimate Interests

It is now well established that Complainant must first make a prima facie case that Respondent lacks rights and legitimate interests in the disputed domain name under paragraph 4(a)(ii) of the Policy, then the burden shifts to Respondent to show it does have rights or legitimate interests. See Advanced International Marketing Corporation v. AA-1 Corp, FA 780200 (FORUM Nov. 2, 2011) (finding that a complainant must offer some evidence to make its prima facie case and satisfy Policy 4(a)(ii)); see also Neal & Massey Holdings Limited v. Gregory Ricks, FA 1549327 (Forum Apr. 12, 2014) (“Under Policy 4(a)(ii), Complainant must first make out a prima facie case showing that Respondent lacks rights and legitimate interests in respect of an at-issue domain name and then the burden, in effect, shifts to Respondent to come forward with evidence of its rights or legitimate interests”).

The Panel finds that Complainant has made out a prima facie case that arises from the following considerations:

(a) Respondent has chosen to take Complainant’s well-known and respected TOEFL trademark and to use it in its domain name, adding only the letter “r” which, as the Complainant has rightly argued “carries minimal distinctiveness” and hence encourages the internet user to think that it is even more likely that the domain name is an official TOEFL domain name;
(b) Respondent registered the domain name on March 7, 2019;
(c) Respondent is using the disputed domain name to resolve to a website which provides assisted services for candidates taking the TOEFL, GRE or other examinations organized by the Complainant, thereby suggesting that this is being done either by the Complainant or with its approval; accordingly the domain name is being used dishonestly;
(d) There is no evidence to suggest that the Respondent is commonly known by the domain name or any other name linked to Toefl and, indeed, the WHOIS result, which is in evidence, makes it clear that the registrant is commonly known by the name recorded as that of the Respondent;
(e) There is no evidence to suggest that the Respondent is in any way connected with or is an associate of the Complainant;
(f) There is no evidence to suggest that the Respondent is using the domain name for a legitimate purpose;
(g) The Respondent has clearly registered the domain name to use it for an improper purpose, to pretend that it is associated with the Complainant and has done so;
(h) The Respondent has been engaged in these activities without the consent or approval of Complainant.

(i) The webpage to which the disputed domain name resolves has been adduced in evidence by the Complainant. It is clear from that evidence that an attempt has been made by the Respondent to have the webpage look as if it were an official page of the Complainant or approved by it. Use of a disputed domain name to appear like a complainant’s official website is not a bona fide offering of goods or services or legitimate noncommercial or fair use per paragraph 4(c)(i) or (iii) of the Policy. See Fossil, Inc. v. cheng gong, FA 1458182 (Forum, October 2, 2012) (finding that Respondent’s efforts to use the FOSSIL mark to divert customers for Respondent’s own commercial gain was not a bona fide offering of goods or services under Policy 4(c)(i) or a legitimate noncommercial or fair use pursuant to Policy 4(c)(iii).

All of these matters go to make out the prima facie case against Respondent. As Respondent has not filed a Response or attempted by any other means to rebut the prima facie case against it, the Panel finds that Respondent has no rights or legitimate interests in the disputed domain name.

Complainant has thus made out the second of the three elements that it must establish.

C) Bad Faith

It is clear that to establish bad faith for the purposes of the Policy, Complainant must show that the disputed domain name was registered in bad faith and has been used in bad faith. It is also clear that the criteria set out in paragraph 4(b) of the Policy for establishing bad faith are not exclusive, but that Complainants in UDRP proceedings may also rely on conduct that is bad faith within the generally accepted meaning of that expression.

Having regard to those principles, the Panel finds that the disputed domain name was registered and used in bad faith. That is so for the following reasons.

First, the practical result of the Respondent’s conduct is that Complainant submits that it disrupts Complainant’s business by registering the domain name and intentionally creating a false association with Complainant through the display of the images and text on the resolving webpage. Using a confusingly similar domain name to create a false association with a complainant can evince bad faith under paragraph 4(b)(iii) & (iv) of the Policy. see Dell Inc. v. Prashant Chhibber, FA 1785651 (Forum June 1, 2018) (“The Panel finds that Respondent used the domain names to create confusion with Complainant’s DELL mark for commercial gain and that Respondent registered the domain names in bad faith under Policy 4(b)(iv).”). The Panel has looked at the exhibit which is a screenshot from the webpage to which the domain name resolves. It is partly in Chinese, clearly to attract the Chinese market for the services offered by the Complainant. But it is also partly in English, and the Panel is able to discern its purpose. That purpose is clearly to align itself with the Complainant and its services and to suggest some affiliation with it. Such conduct is deceptive and amounts to bad faith. Accordingly, the Panel finds that the Respondent registered and used the domain name in bad faith within the meaning of paragraphs 4(b)(iii) & (iv) of the Policy.
Secondly, the same analysis shows that the Respondent had actual knowledge of Complainant’s rights in the TOEFL mark at the time of registering the domain name. Actual knowledge of a complainant’s rights in a mark prior to registering a confusingly similar domain name can evince bad faith under Policy 4(a)(iii). See iFinex Inc. v. xu shuaiwei, FA 1760249 (Forum January 1, 2018) (“Respondent’s prior knowledge is evident from the notoriety of Complainant’s BITFINEX trademark as well as from Respondent’s use of its trademark laden domain name to direct internet traffic to a website which is a direct competitor of Complainant”). The Panel therefore agrees with the Complainant that to use and trade on the Complainant’s well-known and respected trademark as the Respondent has done and to include the content on its webpage as the Respondent has also done, it must have had actual knowledge of the trademark when it registered the domain name incorporating the trademark. Thus, registering and using the domain name has been for an improper purpose. The Panel therefore finds that the Respondent had actual knowledge of Complainant’s mark when it registered the domain name which constitutes bad faith registration.

The Complainant has advanced several other persuasive arguments summarized above. There is no need to refer to them in any detail here, other than to say that the Panel agrees with those submissions and that they show the Respondent’s bad faith registration and use.

Thirdly, in addition and having regard to the totality of the evidence, the Panel finds that, in view of Respondent’s registration of the disputed domain name using the TOEFL mark and in view of the conduct that Respondent has engaged in when using the disputed domain name, Respondent registered and used it in bad faith within the generally accepted meaning of that expression.

Complainant has thus made out the third of the three elements that it must establish.

6. Decision

As the Complainant has established all three elements required under the ICANN Policy, the Panel concludes that relief shall be GRANTED.

It is therefore Ordered that the <toeflr.com> domain name be TRANSFERRED from the Respondent to the Complainant.
